

Time for MSPs to scrutinise the business case for the funicular

Description

Question S5W-31705: John Finnie, Highlands and Islands, Scottish Green Party, Date Lodged: 09/09/2020

To ask the Scottish Government whether the Highlands and Islands Enterprise business case for the repair of the funicular on Cairn Gorm will be published in full to allow the Parliament and the public to scrutinise the plans prior to the Scottish Government's decision on the matter.

Answered by Fergus Ewing (17/09/2020):

The business case for the repair of the funicular on Cairngorm will be published shortly.

Question S5W-31706: John Finnie, Highlands and Islands, Scottish Green Party, Date Lodged: 09/09/2020

To ask the Scottish Government when it expects to receive the business case for the repair of the funicular on Cairn Gorm from Highlands and Islands Enterprise, and how long it estimates it will take for a decision to be reached.

Answered by Fergus Ewing (17/09/2020):

Highlands and Islands Enterprise has shared the business case with the Scottish Government. A decision on the repair of the funicular on Cairngorm is expected shortly.

Current Status: Answered by Fergus Ewing on 17/09/2020

In response to recent written Parliamentary questions, Fergus Ewing (Cabinet Secretary for Rural Economy) has stated that:

- A decision on the repair of the funicular is expected shortly.
- The business case will be published shortly.

This suggests that there will be no period between publication of the business case and a decision by the Scottish Government. The following is adapted from a press release which has been put out by four outdoor organisations (Cairngorms Campaign; North East Mountain Trust; Ramblers Scotland; Scottish Wild Land Group) in response. These bodies published the 'Vision' for Cairngorm at the end of 2019 (see here).

The central argument is that MSPs, and the public, must be given the chance to scrutinise the business case for the repair of the funicular and associated expenditure, now submitted by Highlands and Islands Enterprise to the Scottish Government, PRIOR to any decisions being taken. The stakes for the mountain are too high and the sums of money too great for a policy of full openness and transparency not to be adopted.

Readers of Parkswatch who share these concerns are strongly encouraged to write to their MSPs asking them to press the Government to publish the business case now.

Extracts from news release

A coalition of outdoors organisations is calling for plans drawn up by Highlands & Islands Enterprise (HIE) to be made publicly available prior to a decision by the Scottish Government as to whether to fund the proposals. The four organisations are concerned that public money may be wasted on costly and unsustainable proposals for the mountain's ski area, including the fate of the funicular railway which has been closed since 2018.

The group is very concerned about the lack of transparency and public accountability regarding decisions about the future of Cairngorm Mountain ski centre. They believe it is crucial that any future plans should evaluate two scenarios, one with and one without the funicular railway to ensure full value for public funds which are being invested in the area.

Dave Windle of North East Mountain Trust representing the group said:

“Skiers have been deserting the mountain since well before the closure of the funicular¹. It's now clear that the funicular is not even needed to attract summer visitors given the number of tourists flocking to the area this summer when it wasn't working. HIE's plans must get things right this time or more public money will be wasted, and downhill skiers will continue to go elsewhere.”

The group is calling for a sustainable skiing operation to be created along with summer activities which are compatible with an environmentally sensitive high mountain environment.

From the moment the funicular ceased operation, the group believes that HIE decided that the funicular should be repaired and discarded other options. Of equal concern is the likelihood that a decision to repair will be made by the Government without any opportunity for parliamentary or public scrutiny of the financial details.

“It will be totally unacceptable if the Government takes a decision before allowing MSPs and the public to consider the rational for, and the costs of, the case presented by HIE. Of particular concern is the fact that future costs will not be limited to the £10-£15m estimate for the repair of the funicular but will need to include new ski uplift as well, probably a high speed chair lift, whether or not the funicular is repaired. In addition, there is a large backlog of maintenance of the infrastructure, including the Day Lodge and the Ptarmigan buildings.

“On top of that, all previous operators have lost money. Things need to be different this time, which is why HIE and the Government need to be open and transparent. Local skiing enthusiasts have better ideas on how to get skiers back to Cairngorm.

“The business case for supporting the repair of funicular must be made public now before a decision is taken. Only in this way can people and businesses on Speyside, skiers and those who are concerned about the mountain be assured that repair of the funicular is the best option and that public money wouldn't be better spent on a different model or on supporting struggling businesses elsewhere on Speyside."

Note 1: Over the period 2004 – 2013, average annual skier days were 78,000 equating to a 41% share of the total Scottish market. Over the period 2014 -2018, this was down to 60,000 (32% market share), a reduction of 30%.
