

Lomond and Trossachs National Park Authority and access: challenging the propaganda

Description

The propaganda

default watermark

Loch Lomond & The Trossachs National Park's post

Loch Lomond & The Trossachs National Park

17h · 🌐

We'd love to know, what's your favourite walk to enjoy in the National Park?

Perhaps it's a meander through Callander Meadows taking in the wildlife and wild flowers by the banks of the River Teith, or a more challenging hike in the Arrochar Alps where you might be lucky enough to spot a golden eagle soaring high over the mountain tops.

Wherever you choose to walk, we hope you take joy from those special moments in nature.

▶ for walking #inspo

1 - Arrochar Alps

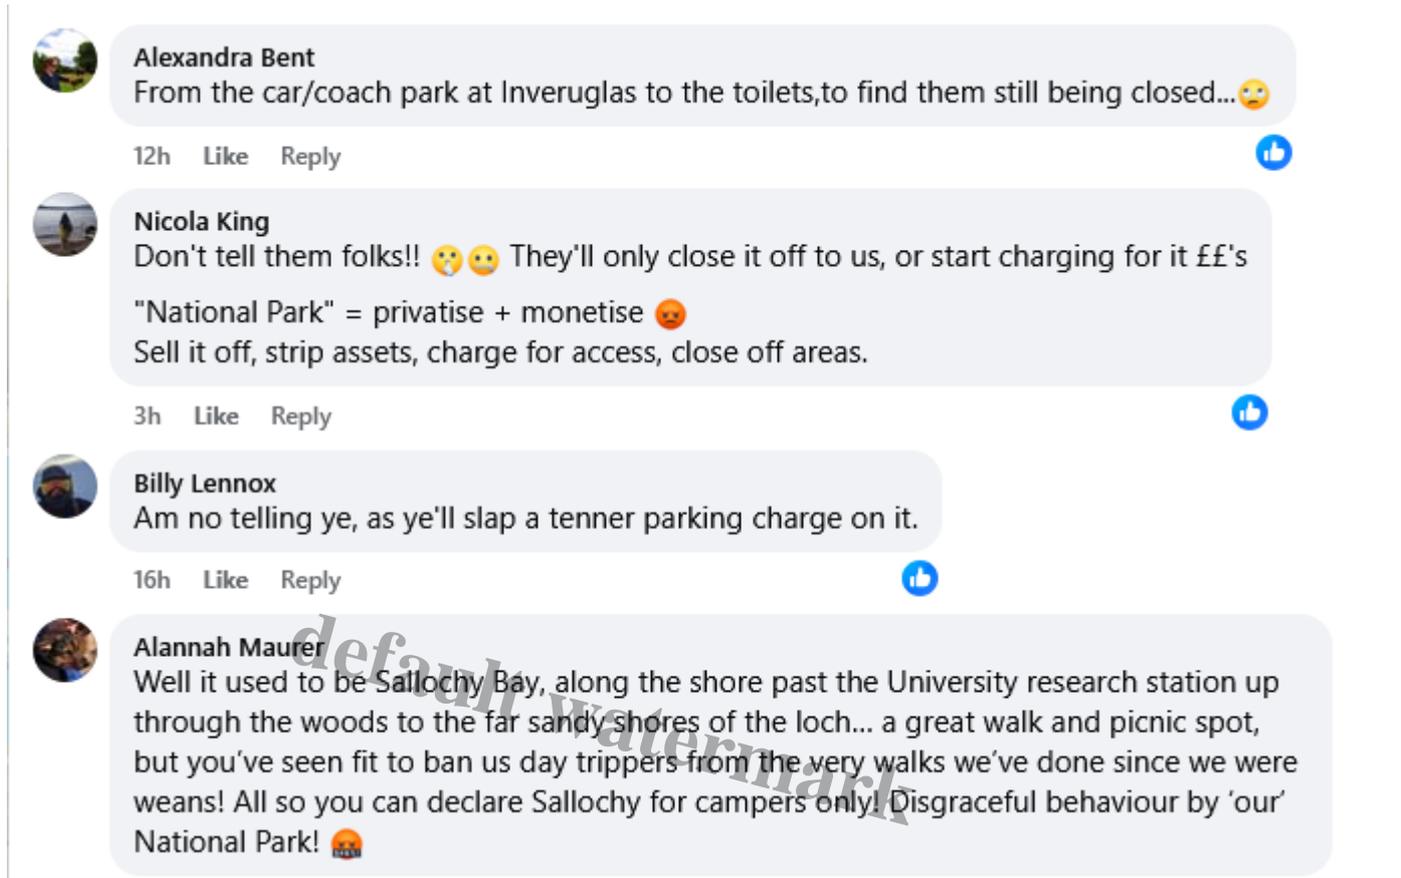

2 - Aerial view of Callander

#NationalWalkingMonth #Walking #NatureConnections #NatureNeedsHeroes

Posted on 7th May

The reality

Thanks to Alannah Maurer who alerted me to this FB post and the comments including her own

First the Loch Lomond and Trossachs National Park Authority (LLTNPA) went after the campers, confining them to a few "permit areas" around the loch shores; then they went for the day visitors by shutting down visitor infrastructure and making it harder and harder to get to places; who and what will be next?

The LLTNPA's attempts to restrict access represent not just an attack on access rights but on local culture and traditions. The people who are fighting back and challenging all the propaganda being spewed out by what is supposed to be a National Park are to be celebrated.

Category

1. Loch Lomond and Trossachs

Tags

1. access rights
2. camping
3. LLTNPA
4. Local communities
5. visitor management

Date Created

May 8, 2025

Author

nickkempe

default watermark